

MIRAJO SISTER PRAYER

I take my time today to be in sync with my sisters. My sisters do not need to mean biologically related, but because she is a woman, she is a representation of who I was, who I am, or who I want to become. Thank you for giving me peace, and for my sister who is in a place of confusion, I extend my peace to her. I give this time today to ask for her to have calmness around her, and that she can find stillness even in the small moments of her day. I recognize that we may not have the same advantages or disadvantages, but I sit here and visualize her completely whole, taking confident steps toward her goals.

I have gratitude for my healing, and I speak life to every limb, organ, and cell of my sister's body as she takes positive actions toward her well-being. I see my sister whole and wipe her tears as she experiences pain. My sister is a direct extension of me, and I treat her with care and patience. My sister is never alone as she courageously faces life's challenges.

I see myself standing outside, holding hands with all my sisters around the world. We are in unison in our prayer. My sisters speak a multitude of languages that are for our good. I visualize each of them contributing to positive change in their communities, inspiring others, and pursuing their dreams with determination.

I am thankful I am not in bondage or in a state of abuse. I speak directly to my sisters' minds who are in a state of turmoil or feel there is no way out, and I visualize them taking steps toward freedom, finding their voice, and breaking free from oppression. I do not leave or forget my sister until the day she is free, and even on that day, I am present for her healing.

I am thankful that I have a home and food to eat today. I see my sister, who was once given nothing, taking courageous steps to nourishment and refuge, building a safe and loving environment for herself and her loved ones.

In our collective visualization and prayer, may our sisters find strength, courage, and empowerment as they take action to shape their destinies and create positive change in the world.

I envision my sisters experiencing emotional well-being, finding inner peace, and summoning the strength to gracefully navigate life's challenges. I see them as resilient individuals, confidently facing whatever comes their way.

I visualize my sisters as they stand at the crossroads of difficult decisions, bathed in the radiant light of guidance and wisdom. They make choices that align with their highest good, walking their paths with determination.

With love and compassion, I picture my sisters breaking through the walls of loneliness. They effortlessly connect with kindred spirits, forging profound friendships that offer unwavering support and warmth.

I witness my sisters embracing their innate power and recognizing their immeasurable worth. They courageously pursue their dreams with unwavering confidence, painting their futures with vibrant colors.

As my sisters fulfill their caregiving roles, I see them carving out moments for rest and self-care, tending to their own needs with the same devotion they give to others.

Healing energy surrounds my sisters who are unwell, guiding them toward swift recovery and vibrant health. They radiate vitality as they overcome any challenges on their path to wellness.

I visualize a world where all my sisters have open doors to education, boundless opportunities, and abundant resources. They thrive and flourish, stepping into their full potential with grace.

In unity, I stand alongside my sisters who are unwavering advocates for justice and equality. Their voices resonate far and wide, creating ripples of positive change that benefit us all.

I pray for the safety and protection of my sisters across the globe. They are shielded from harm and find solace and refuge whenever they need it.

With deep gratitude, I honor the strength and resilience of my sisters. They rise above adversity, crafting a brighter future not only for themselves but also for generations to come.

In our collective vision and prayer, may our sisters worldwide experience empowerment, fulfillment, and the unwavering support of all women.

Thank You!

Written by Miranda Johnson, Founder of Mirajo Collective